

THE WEDDING STYLE GUIDE

Dressed to Marry

A field guide to bespoke wedding suits, color palettes and coordinating the modern wedding party.

ALEX NASS

BESPOKE TAILORING · BRUSSELS · ATELIER LEUVEN

Current Wedding Suit Trends

The modern groom is moving away from rigid black tuxedos toward softer, more personal silhouettes. Single-breasted three-piece suits in earthy tones — sand, taupe, deep olive — now lead the conversation alongside the timeless midnight navy.

Construction matters more than ever. Half-canvas and full-canvas builds create the kind of natural drape that machine-fused jackets cannot replicate. Soft Neapolitan shoulders, slightly suppressed waists and a one-button closure photograph beautifully and feel relaxed all day long.

Lapels are widening again — 8 to 9 cm — and notch lapels are being replaced by elegant peak lapels even on daytime weddings. The result is a look that is celebratory without being costume.

Wedding Color Trends 2025–2026

Champagne & warm neutrals. Stone, oat, latte and warm beige dominate spring and summer ceremonies. These tones are gentle on every skin tone and pair effortlessly with bridal whites and soft florals.

Earth tones. Terracotta, rust and deep olive are taking over autumn weddings. They photograph richly under golden-hour light and mix elegantly with linen and wool blends.

Refined navy & midnight blue. Always a safe answer. A deep navy with a slight chestnut undertone remains the most flattering color for grooms across all seasons.

Accent palette. Burgundy, sage green and dusty rose are the strongest accessory colors of the season — ideal for ties, pocket squares and groomsmen accents.

Groomsmen Styling Tips

The role of the groomsmen is to support the groom visually — never to compete with him. The cleanest way to achieve this is by dressing them in the same family of color but a different tone or texture.

Shared element, varied detail. Same lapel shape, same trouser silhouette, same shoe color — but vary the suit by one shade. The wedding party reads as a single composition without looking like a uniform.

Accessory hierarchy. Reserve the strongest tie color for the groom. Groomsmen wear the same fabric in a quieter pattern, or the same pattern in a calmer color. Pocket squares should echo, not match exactly.

Comfort is non-negotiable. Fittings, stretch lining and breathable fabrics matter more than any stylistic detail. A wedding lasts 14 hours; the suit has to last with it.

How to Coordinate the Wedding Party

Start with a single mood-board image — the bridal look, the venue, the season — and build the entire party palette outward from it. Three colors maximum: a base, a complement, an accent.

Decide early whether fathers and ushers wear the same family or contrast against the groomsmen. A subtle shift (matte vs. textured wool, or notch vs. peak lapel) is enough to read on camera without disrupting harmony.

Plan one collective fitting before the wedding. Photographs reveal mismatches the eye misses in a mirror — trouser break, sleeve length, tie knot size. A 30-minute group fitting saves a thousand future regrets.

At Alex Nass we coordinate the entire wedding party from a single brief — groom, groomsmen, fathers — ensuring every silhouette photographs as one composed family.

Ready to begin?

Visit alexnass.com or write to contact@alexnass.com to book your private consultation at our Leuven atelier — or invite us to your home anywhere in Flanders.